Why the Content Is Useful to Readers

The strongest informational value of the website is its organization. Instead of placing all records in one long page, the site separates current charts, yearly archives, monthly archives, and individual market pages. This makes it easier for a visitor to move from a current result view to older records.

The Satta King Record pages are particularly useful as an archive-style resource because the navigation exposes multiple years of historical charts. For readers researching past records, the yearly structure can be more convenient than searching through unrelated pages.

Suggested Internal-Content Structure

Priority	Recommended content connection
1	Homepage → current result section → latest chart
2	Current chart → individual market record page
3	Individual market page → yearly historical chart
4	Yearly chart → monthly archive
5	Historical chart → explanatory / FAQ content
