FAQs About Tramadol

What is Tramadol used for?

Tramadol is a prescription opioid pain medication used to treat moderate to moderately severe pain. It may be prescribed for short-term pain after surgery or injury and, in extended-release form, for chronic pain when other treatments are not effective.

Is Tramadol an opioid?

Yes. Tramadol is an opioid (narcotic) analgesic and is classified as a Schedule IV controlled substance in the United States because it has the potential for misuse, dependence, and addiction.

How long does Tramadol stay in your system?

Tramadol has an average half-life of about 6 to 7 hours. It can remain in the body for approximately 1–2 days, although traces may be detectable in urine for up to 4 days, depending on metabolism, dosage, and duration of use.

What are the most common side effects of Tramadol?

Common side effects include nausea, dizziness, drowsiness, constipation, headache, dry mouth, and vomiting. Serious side effects such as breathing problems, seizures, or serotonin syndrome require immediate medical attention.

Can Tramadol cause addiction?

Yes. Although Tramadol has a lower abuse potential than some stronger opioids, it can still lead to physical dependence, misuse, and addiction, especially if taken for long periods or at higher doses than prescribed.

Can you take Tramadol with Tylenol (acetaminophen)?

In many cases, yes. Healthcare providers sometimes recommend taking Tramadol with acetaminophen for additional pain relief. However, you should only combine medications under the guidance of your healthcare provider.

Can Tramadol make you sleepy?

Yes. Drowsiness and dizziness are common side effects. Until you know how Tramadol affects you, avoid driving, operating machinery, or performing tasks that require alertness.

What happens if you stop taking Tramadol suddenly?

Stopping Tramadol abruptly after regular use may cause withdrawal symptoms such as anxiety, sweating, insomnia, nausea, muscle aches, tremors, and flu-like symptoms. Doctors usually recommend gradually reducing the dose.

Can Tramadol cause seizures?

Yes. Tramadol may increase the risk of seizures, particularly at high doses or when combined with certain antidepressants or other medications that lower the seizure threshold.

Can you drink alcohol while taking Tramadol?

No. Drinking alcohol while taking Tramadol can increase the risk of severe drowsiness, slowed breathing, overdose, and death. It is safest to avoid alcohol completely during treatment.
